MUSINGS: In his reflections on Mission Today in the recently-published third volume of Treasures of Irish Christianity, Bishop Brendan Leahy writes: 'While not intending to undervalue the role of missionaries going to distant lands to proclaim the gospel, with the Second Vatican Council there was a renewed recognition that the whole Church is missionary and not just in a geographical sense. Everything about the Church should be communicating the central message of the gospel, in all walks of life as well as in all corners of the world. All the baptised, both individually and together, are involved in mission.'

Salvador Ryan - St Patrick's College, Maynooth
